Acton Memorial Library Civil War Exhibit Enhancement

Revised

Amount Requested: $15,300

Project Summary:

In 2005 we were granted $30,150 of CPA funding, with $4,000 being added from Library funds, to design and install a permanent exhibit to tell the story of Acton's unique role as "first to fight" in the Revolutionary War that founded our nation and among the first to fight in the Civil War that preserved it. The exhibit, "Not Afraid to Go," telling this story was dedicated on Patriot's Day this year and, for the first time, the extraordinary artifacts, documents and images given to the Library over the years by veterans and their families have been preserved and made available to the public.

However, the final cost of the exhibit exceeded the original estimate of $34,150 for several reasons, the major one being the expansion in scope found necessary to adequately display our artifacts, images and documents and fully tell the story of Acton's role in the formation and preservation of our Nation. This caused the exhibit to grow in area, doubled the number of display panels needed, required more lighting and required more layout study to best fit the available space. Another major factor was the unforeseen difficulty and expense of adequately lighting the exhibit in the original library building, while meeting current codes for height clearance and safety. Finally, the additional curatorial work needed took more time than planned, with the delay adding to the cost.

Eliminating one of the two audio stations planned and deferring the audio programming needed to use the stations reduced cost. We also saved the cost of a computer to provide access to our extensive database on Acton's Civil War veterans by using an old unit slated for disposal. Reusing lighting not suitable for the exhibit in other areas of the library also represented a saving.

Additional funding was sought and received, with the Board of Trustees approving funding from the Lois Parker bequest (a library fund) and generous contributions coming from the Friends of the Acton Libraries, the Acton Memorial Library Foundation and the Acton Rotary and Lions clubs. In spite of this a shortfall still existed that the exhibit designer, Will Twombly of Spokeshave Design, closed by deferring billing for a portion of their services. As their work was exemplary and the added cost was in no way their responsibility we feel the deferred amount should be billed and paid.

This proposal requests funding to add the deleted audio station and do the deferred programming, provide a new stand-alone-computer, add lighting in two areas where it is now inadequate, enlarge some of the graphics in the section on the conduct of the Civil War, improved signage to make the exhibit more visible and pay the deferred bill.

Audio Station/Programming:

While the exhibit includes text describing the actions and feelings of the people of Acton at the time of the start of the Revolutionary War and before, during and after the Civil War, merely reading what they spoke and wrote cannot convey the same immediacy and appreciation as hearing their words. The audio stations were planned to allow their words, at times with appropriate music and sound effects added, to give visitors to the exhibit this visceral feel for the attitudes and feelings of the people of Acton during these times. Two stations were planned. A station near the beginning of the exhibit would cover the start of the Revolutionary War and the lead-up to the Civil War.

The current exhibit has an audio station in the area covering the conduct of the war, what was happening on the home front and the post-war era. It consists of an audio unit manufactured by Nel-Tech Labs of Derry, New Hampshire, mounted in a custom-built cabinet. This unit accepts up to eight audio clips stored on a standard USB memory stick and allows them to be selected with pushbuttons mounted on the cabinet top surface. Adding similar unit near the beginning of the exhibit is proposed. This unit would be identical to the existing unit except that it would use headphones (rather than small speakers as on the existing unit) in order to avoid emitting sound that might disturb library users. (The low level of sound from the speakers on the existing unit is acceptable because the unit is located away from areas of normal library use.) The estimated cost of this unit is $1,500 (see estimate as Attachment 3).

In addition to adding the unit, doing the necessary narration, reading, recording, adding of music and/or sound effects and audio mixing and editing be done to provide sixteen (16) sound clips of one to three-minute duration is also proposed. The estimated cost for this is $2,500 (see estimate as Attachment 4.).

Some of the words written and spoken that will be considered for inclusion are:

- “I haven’t a man who is afraid to go,” spoken by Isaac Davis.
- Conversation between James Hayward, as he lay dying, and his father
- Affidavit of Hannah Davis about the day her husband was killed.
- Letter(s) home from 19-year-old George Reed who went through Baltimore with Acton’s Davis Guards on April 19, 1861, including quote “it is not so pretty to be a soldier as it is to play one”.
- All or some of the resolution passed by the 1851 Acton Town Meeting opposing the Fugitive Slave Act.
- Capt. Daniel Tuttle's recollections of the call-up of the Davis Guards on April 15th.
- James Richardson's page from the GAR book where he describes the trial and execution of the Booth conspirators.
- Excerpts from Aaron Jones Fletcher's diary.
- Quotes from A. J. Fletcher's mother, including the one where she tells him not to re-enlist.
- Selections from the diary of Edwin B. Taft, who served through the War in the 26th Mass. Vol. Infantry.

Hi All,

Boy, is a little added lighting expensive!

Billy Thomas called this morning with an estimate and, even after I talked him down in scope as much as I could, his number was $1,550.

I've adjusted the numbers in the proposal, with the total now being $15,300 (the contingency is now at ~10% on the items that need any contingency, or $692).

Unfortunately, the material for the Selectmen had to go out Friday, so it went with the lower cost. (We had estimated, I thought generously, $1,000 for the added lighting.)

The revised two-page summary that went to the Selectmen, with the changed numbers in red, is attached.

I have copied Paulina on this so she will know of the change, and will bring revised copies of summary to the meeting tonight.
