The list of implementation plan changes is ready for now.

The only stuff that I'm sure needs committee review is changes to goal 7 language: <http://implementation.acton2020.info/node/151>

There's a bunch of smaller changes that I've marked for consultant review.

And committee members might want to look at the items with their names on them - I've responded to their comments and other edits.

The priority list and ripe list look OK enough to me. I might take some 2nd priority items and lower them to 'other action steps'. I'd still like to delete the natural gas item. There's other small adjustments I'd make, but they can wait. And I might have some items lurking in my email that would require adjustments to the implementation plan, but I haven't done a complete look yet. Jim & Daphne have given me some small technical changes to make before this turns in to a printed list, which I can take care of on Sunday.

Good luck tonight.

Howdy committee members:

I've been looking through comments committee members have left, and the changes y'all have made.

In the case of comments, I've either implemented the changes suggested, or some variant thereof, or explained why I thought things didn't need changing.

In the case of changes, I've either done nothing, or made some additional changes.

In all cases, I've been tracking what I'm up to here in this spreadsheet.

There's a column for who made the comments or the change, if you want to review.

There's a couple of things that ask for consultant review - I recommend Jim or Daphne search for 'consultant'.

There's a column that has the outline, and I'm periodically sorting the sheet by the outline, so all the stuff for the same goal should be together, if you want to review the changes to your goal.

If you see anything untoward I did, I might recommend you get Margaret and the consultants involved.

If I see anything that needs full committee review (so far I haven't), I'll note that in the Recommendations column.

I won't be there on Wednesday night. I hope to have this review done by then, but I wanted to let y'all know of the work in progress.
